With more than 100 undergraduate and graduate programs, the College of Education provides programs helping students to create change on a personal level. Our students go on to improve lives in fields such as teaching, counseling and mental health, communication sciences, and sport and physical well-being. Others specialize in the latest learning technologies, teach special populations or lead entire organizations. But no matter which area they choose, our students are united by a deep sense of duty and dedication to improve our communities one individual at a time.

LEARN BY DOING
Through placements in local classrooms, internships at organizations or clinics, or opportunities within our research labs, students in the College of Education apply skills outside of the college classroom through rewarding community experiences.

LABS AND CLINICS
Driven by faculty research, our labs and clinics give students the opportunity to work alongside leaders in their field. Opportunities to get involved include research centers focusing on new ways to learn, labs exploring the connections between our brains and our bodies, and clinics that give students experience working in their chosen field.

DOUBLE THE OPPORTUNITY
The College of Education offers 16 Double Dawg pathways in both teaching and non-teaching professions. This program allows motivated students the academic challenges they crave, as well as expanded options and earning power after graduation.
