FOUNDATION FELLOWSHIP

Known as the university's premier academic undergraduate scholarship, the Foundation Fellowship provides students with an abundance of opportunities throughout their time at the University of Georgia. Foundation Fellowship students not only get to explore their curiosities on the Athens campus with a close cohort of peers and faculty mentoring, but take their studies abroad through travel grants that allow them to explore the depths of their world. Among the on-campus benefits provided to Fellows is access to Honors staff members including the Major Scholarships Coordinator, who provides important counsel for a variety of pursuits – including drafting personal statements, resumes, and cover letters for job, scholarship and postgraduate study applications.

Annual stipend for non-Georgia resident students: $20,400 plus a Presidential waiver (currently worth $19,040 per year)

Three fully funded spring travel-study programs (first through third years, valued at $9,900)

One fully funded summer study abroad program to Oxford University immediately following the first year (valued at $8,500)

Individual travel-study grants up to a cumulative total of $9,000

Research and academic conference grants up to a cumulative total of $1,750

Faculty, peer and alumni mentoring

Complementing the Foundation Fellows Program is Morehead Honors College, one of the oldest and most respected colleges in the country. The college provides some 2,500 students with the resources to make the most of their higher education experience – including 300 Honors classes a year with an average class size of 17 students, expert advice from Honors and faculty advisors, independent research opportunities, mentoring, internships, lunchbox lectures and book discussions with faculty and the Myers Hall residential community.

CURO HONORS SCHOLARS

CURO Honors Scholars receive $3,000 in funding each year; enjoy mentoring and community support; and attend special seminars, workshops, events and activities.

CURO Honors Scholars pursue their own research agenda in their first semester at UGA and they can conduct research in any discipline at UGA, including (but not limited to) physical, biological, and social sciences; business; international affairs; engineering; humanities; and the fine and performing arts.

CURO Honors Scholars also form a community of diverse students committed to growing academically and individually. They receive regular contact with Morehead Honors College staff members who assist them in professional development.

"I knew that the College of Education would help me become the kind of educator I want to be, because it embodied the qualities I hope to develop in myself: a drive for excellence, boundless kindness and a commitment to equity and justice. On top of that, being offered the Fellowship introduced me to all of the opportunities UGA has to offer within and beyond the scholarship: study abroad programs, research opportunities and so much more."
